Marco Enríquez-Ominami arrived at his polling station this morning, stirring anticipation among the press as he was joined by his daughter Fernanda. Following the voting process, the presidential candidate held a press conference before accompanying his mother, Manuela Gumucio, to exercise her civic duty — a moment closely followed by the media.

The day was also notable for a heartfelt message from his daughter Manuela, who shared on social media from France that she had cast her first vote abroad. In her post, she expressed: “My first vote is for dignity, justice, and truth. Dear Dad, to resist is a duty. Proud of you.” This message was highlighted by the candidate’s team as a touching gesture during the electoral campaign.
